WHILST THE MIST O'ER THE MOUNTAIN, 5
New Words by Mr. Clebury, adapted with new Symphonies & Accompaniments, to the admired Air of the SWISS BOY by J. L. ABEL.

ANDANTE

While the mist o'er the mountain is borne from the vale, And the torrent's rude dash on the gale; While o'er the hamlet dark tempests impend, And the blast mutes the pine forest's bend.
On a crag of the Jungfrau I fearlessly lie, and look down on the stormy clouds beneath me that fly, Oh land of our fathers the brave and the free, What clime on this earth is like thee.
(419)

The lightfooted Chamois bounds over the rock
The hunter his swiftness doth mock;
And follows his prey o'er the frowning glacier
His bold heart a stranger to fear;
Till eye sees him turn to the green sheltered spot
Where his flocks crop the herbage, and rimes his cot.
Oh, land of our fathers, the brave and the free,
What clime on this earth is like thee!

O land of our fathers! what soil is so blest,
Bright Liberty's cradle and nest!
Or so ho is so gay as the light Mountaineer
Who roams o'er the wild, free as air;
Whose bosom no deeds of ambition infest
When he turns to the home of his birthright and rest.
Oh land of our fathers, the brave and the free,
What clime on this earth is like thee!
